Biography

From a young age I've enjoyed challenging myself both physically and mentally. Throughout high school I was involved in athletics, downhill mountain biking and parkour. It was during high school that I decided I wanted to be in the stunt industry.

I began Parkour in 2005, in 2007 K-Swiss launched the worlds first Parkour shoe; my team and I worked with the K-Swiss marketing department to help promote the shoe through creating videos and performing live events.

In 2008 I began Hapkido training with the Australian Hapkido Association and in 2010 took part in the Australian Hapkido Tournament coming 3rd in my division.

In 2009 I developed an interest in travel and spent one month in a Martial Arts academy in China intensively training in Sanda, weapons and Kung Fu.

I took up rock climbing in 2012, as well as frequent climbing in Sydney I have been to Thailand three times to climb the lime stone cliffs and caves. I usually lead climb but also do a bit of top roping, abseiling and deep-water soloing. I began training at Stunt Gym in 2012. I currently train there 3 nights a week and instruct parkour classes in the afternoons.

I've also attended university for 5 years to become a high school PDHPE and Science teacher. I'm employed as a substitute teacher; this is an ideal job for pursuing a stunt career because of its flexibility.

After finishing my degree and coming back from my last trip overseas I've decided to stay in Australia so I can focus all my time and effort on training and developing my stunt career.
